

Masaki Mori

Dept of Real Estate
School of Design & Environment

My main teaching strength comes from my unique teaching experience. I have taught undergraduates, graduates, and corporate executives from over 100 countries at U.S. and Japanese universities as well as at NUS. I am capable of catering to different needs of students who have a variety of learning styles. My teaching style consists of lecturing, video demonstrations, hands-on computer workshops, and active small-group discussions, which allow students with different learning styles to deeply understand even complicated concepts and theories.

Another teaching strength is my industry experience. I always give my students challenging practical projects, ones that require a substantial amount of analytical work as well as the deepest understanding of knowledge and theories. This way, my students are well equipped with practical skills as well as fundamental knowledge, which maximizes their market value in industry. My industry experience also allows me to nurture ethical business professionals, which is one of the major missions for any educator in a business-related area, such as finance and real estate.

What Students Say...

"I enjoy how he always uses a variety of methods to engage lecture and help students grasp concepts, i.e. youtube videos, pictorial graphs, industry websites, statistics, newspaper articles etc. Provides insightful industry knowledge. Gives the impression that he genuinely wants to help students focus on learning."

"Prof Mori is passionate about the subject he is teaching and clearly shows it in his style of teaching and comprehensive real-life knowledge."
